TEACHING EXPERIENCE

2026 Spring: Instructor, CRP 3072/5072: Land Use, Environmental Planning and Urban Design Workshop: Innovation, Transportation, and Housing in Boston – Allston Multimodal Project and Beacon Park Yards

- Twelve students produced a transportation, housing, land use, and financing plan for Harvard-owned land in Allston, including a three-day site visit to meet with A Better City, Boston Planning, and other local partners.

2025 Fall: Co-Instructor, CRP 1103: Observing the City

- The required introduction to field-based analysis for Urban and Regional Studies majors, built around experiential learning, field trips, and the Community Land Use Game, a planning simulation I rebuilt for the browser.

2024 Fall: Co-Instructor, CRP 1103: Observing the City

Spring: Instructor, CRP 3850/5850, Special Topics in Planning: Planning Innovative Places

2023 Fall: Co-Instructor, CRP 1103: Observing the City

2022 Spring: Graduate Assistant, GEOG 150B1: Geography and Global Issues

2021 Fall: Graduate Assistant, GEOG 305: Economic Geography

Spring: Instructor, GEOG 305: Economic Geography (online)

- In this course University of Arizona's Urban and Regional Development majors learned about key concepts in economic geography and economic sociology, including economic performativity, theories of urban land rent, world cities, racial capitalism, and innovation.

2020 Fall: Instructor, GEOG 373: Political Geography (online)
- My course on Political Geography focused broadly on geopolitics, examining the history of the territorial state and the role of hegemonic powers in the world system. Topics included colonialism and post-colonialism, race and democracy in the USA, and US-China relations.

Spring: Instructor, GEOG 305: Economic Geography (online)

2019 Fall: Instructor, GE 103: World Geography
Fisher College, Boston
- This large introductory class on human and physical geography introduced students to earth systems science, as well as the cultural, social, and political aspects of world regions. Many of the students at Fisher College are first generation university students, and I found it very rewarding to work with them.

Spring: Instructor, GEOG 305: Economic Geography

2018 Fall: Instructor, GEOG 270: International Development
Spring: Graduate Assistant, GEOG 150C: Environment and Society

2017 Fall: Graduate Assistant, GEOG 150C: Environment and Society
Spring: Grader, Introduction to Marketing (online)
University of Illinois
